Continuation of Late News,
Received by the ship Abeona, arrived at Baltimore.

LONDON, December 20.

HIGH COURT OF ADMIRALTY. DOCTORS' COMMONS, Dec. 19.

This day the right honorable sir William Scott proceeded to the adjudication of the following ship case:

Hannah, Holmes, master. This American vessel, with a cargo of colonial produce, was captured by his majesty's ship of war Ramiles, Francis Pickmore, Esq. commander, and brought to Portsmouth. Cargo restored as claimed.

February 3.

Yesterday we received Paris papers to the 24th, Batavian Gazettes to the 28th ult. and the four first of the five Hamburg mails due arrived.

From all these sources we have given copious extracts. The principal features of the intelligence they contain are, the evacuation of Vienna by the French, the actual march of Napoleon's troops against Naples, the return of the army of England to the opposite coast, the approaching triumphal entry of the emperor of the French into his capital, and his determination to exclude the British commerce from every part of the continent to which his power and influence extend.

American papers 9th ult. have reached us. They were brought by the Prince Adolphus packet, which arrived on Tuesday at Falmouth from New York. The report of an embargo having been laid on British shipping in American ports is unfounded: though it appears that a general feeling of resentment at the captures authorised by the British government, pervades, not only the merchants, but the legislature of the United States also. The ports and harbors are to be immediately put in a state of security and defence: 250,000 dollars have been appropriated to the building of gun boats, and 660,000 dollars to building six line of battle ships. The merchants of N. York, at a general meeting, had addressed a memorial to the president and the Congress, for redress. But while this is directed against England, the mercantile interest is far from being upon good terms with our enemies. American vessels are captured or plundered in the West Indies by Haytiens, French and Spaniards; and it is said that Bonaparte has threatened America with the weight of his resentment, if she do not concede the points in dispute between her and Spain.

It is said that 100,000 carcasses, of an entirely new invention, are now preparing at Woolwich, for an attack on Boulogne in the spring. They are filled with a composition peculiarly destructive, and when once they have taken fire, nothing can prevent their explosion, nor, after the explosion, extinguish the flame. They may be thrown with great precision to a distance of 200 yards.

A letter, of which the following is an extract, has been received from an officer on board of one of sir Home Popham's squadron. It is dated Bay of All-Souls, St. Salvador*, 26th Nov. 1805: "Soon after our sailing from Madeira, sir Home Popham hoisted his pendant as commander of the squadron. When we were within 14 days sail of this place, twelve of the fastest sailing ships were dispatched for the purpose of obtaining a supply of provisions and water. On our arrival, we found two of the ships unfortunately had been wrecked, the Britannia East India man, having on board a detachment of troops, and the King George transport laden with ordnance stores.

A small brig, called the Jack, is also missing; but it is supposed she has bore up for some of the West-India islands. I am happy to say, that the whole of the persons on board of the two ships were saved, except three, one of whom, I understand is a staff officer. Our destination is still a profound secret; but I trust, ere long, you will hear of our being successful. The whole of the squadron with the troops amounting to upwards of 9000, are in perfect health, there not being 100 persons on the sick list."

* Salvador, St. a large, populous and handsome town of South America, in Brazil, with a bishop's see, and several forts: it is the residence of the Viceroy, and contains several religious houses. The inhabitants are voluptuous, proud, ignorant, and superstitious, but carry on considerable trade. The houses are two or three stories high, and the walls thick and strong, being built with stone. The principal streets are large, and there are many gardens, full of a great variety of fruit trees, herbs and flowers. The chief commodities are sugar, tobacco, wood for dyers, raw hides, tallow, and train-oil. It is seated on an eminence, and train-oil. I saw the bay of All-Souls, and the bay of St. Salvador, S. Long.

Turkey.—The intelligence from the Servian frontiers became more and more important, and announces an open contest between the Ottoman government and the insurgents of Servia. The latter are now in possession of Semendria, one of the principal bulwarks of their country. The porte refused to receive the deputies whom the insurgents sent to Constantinople to treat with the divan. These deputies have, therefore, returned to their constituents, without being able to fulfil their mission. The grand seignor, instead of listening to the propositions of accommodation which the Servians had resolved to make, determined to send into their country considerable forces to reduce them. Czerni George, the chief of the insurgents, was no sooner informed of the intentions of the Ottoman government, than he convoked an assembly of the principal Servian commanders at Semendria, and which was held about the beginning of December last. Czerni George opened the meeting by a very long speech, in which he explained the dangers with which Servia was threatened, by the approach of a very numerous Turkish army, and also the means which might be employed, to avert these dangers. After a long deliberation, this assembly adopted a resolution which is in substance as follows: "1. The Servian army shall be reinforced to 100,000 men. 2. Every measure and disposition necessary to prevent an invasion shall be adopted under the direction of the general in chief. 3. The Servian troops shall be supported from week to week by districts, which shall be particularly specified. The punishment of death is decreed against every soldier who shall plunder any of the inhabitants. 4. Strict discipline shall be established in all the corps of the Servian insurgents; every soldier shall pay the most absolute obedience to his superiors, and every chief may punish deserters with death, without making a report to the general in chief. 5. The fortress of Semendria shall be put in the best state of defence. It shall have a garrison of 6000 men, and shall be supplied with provision for two years. 6. The siege of Belgrade shall be continued with the greatest rigor, and if that place does not surrender itself soon, it shall be taken by assault."

February 5.

A letter from Lisbon, of the 30th ult. says, "A vessel is arrived here from Bahia, on the coast of Brazil, which left the English expedition, under general Baird, taking in refreshments at that settlement. Its destination was reported to be the Cape of Good Hope; by others the River Plate. The Britannia, Birch, from London to India, and the King George, transport, were lost on the 4th November, in Parayba river, on the coast of Brazil. General Yorke, and a private artilleryman, were drowned on this occasion."

The following letter came by the mails on Sunday, dated Berlin January 18:

"It is confidently stated here that among the ulterior objects of ambition with the emperor Napoleon, it is his intention to make Lucien Bonaparte, king of Spain, Jerome king of Naples; Benharois, king of Italy; Louis, king of Holland; and Murat, king of Poland. During his stay at Vienna, the emperor discovered from the books of Friess the banker, an order to—It was in consequence of Bonaparte's express demand that Cobentzel was removed. The sums in the hands of that banker at the farther disposal of England, he appropriated to himself and on that account he said lightened the burthens imposed on that city. It is considered certain that the duke of Brunswick will receive the electoral dignity; but it is not said from what territory he is to take his title. Some say that he will retain that of Brunswick Wolfenbuttel, others think that he will make an exchange with the king of Prussia of his own territory, for Paderborn and Hilsdenheim, and call himself elector of Westphalia; but most think and with the greatest apparent probability, that he will obtain the electoral dignity of Hanover. The duke of Brunswick goes to Presburg to communicate to that court the necessary explanations respecting the policy which the king deems most conducive to his own security, and that of the whole north of Europe. The mission is expected to draw closer than before, Russia, Prussia and Saxony. The royal dignity was offered to the elector of Saxony but declined.

The modest usurper insists upon Prussia's giving up Silesia, to the house of Austria as an indemnification for the Tyrol, and to take Hanover in lieu of it; also the port of Embden, and the whole of east Friesland to the Dutch; for which he proposes in return, some part of Holland contiguous to Prussia.

These and several other changes of an inferior nature, he insists upon as sine qua non of his friendship."

"If our internal situation was as prosperous as our external exploits are brilliant we would be the most happy and wealthy people in the universe. The reverse is unfortunately the case. While imperial favorites riot in luxury, and scandalize by extravagance, the community at large are wretched, oppressed by taxes, tormented with distrust, suffering equally from a ruined commerce, from want of confidence and from penury, which is as difficult to be described, as to be believed by foreigners, who have no other opportunity of judging of Bonaparte's empire, but from the columns or paragraphs of the Moniteur.

"It is said that new proposals of peace will immediately after Bonaparte's return here be made to England. If they are refused the army on our coast will be doubled, and the invasion of England, Scotland and Ireland will undoubtedly take place before the next autumn.

"Orders have arrived to form new magazines not only on the coast near Boulogne and Brest, but on the Spanish frontiers; and our politicians pretend, that before we finally settle our differences with Prussia, Russia, and Sweden and other states in the north, Spain and Portugal will, in the south of Europe, recompense some members of the Bonaparte dynasty with new diadems.

"At Toulon they are very active in equipping five ships of the line and four frigates, which are reported to be destined first for Carthage, and afterwards for the West Indies; if they can escape your cruisers."

"Besides the electorates already elevated into kingdoms by our emperor, he intends according to report, to confer, the same honors on the republics of Helvetia & Batavia. His brother-in-law Murat, is intended as the sovereign of the latter, and his brother-in-law prince Borghese, is to be king of the former. The electors of Saxony and of Hesse have also been offered regal rank, if consenting to certain pecuniary sacrifices.

"Spain will, within 12 months (remember what I write) share the fate of Italy. With Portugal, she is intended to be ruled by the sceptre of a Bonaparte; but whether by that of a Joseph, Lucien, or Jerome, depends upon the success of our cabinet in its plan on the Turkish empire, or in its intrigues with Prussia, Russia and the other courts of the north.

"Some serious jealousies had broken out between our principal generals. Bernadotte's favor with our emperor increased so much after the battle of Austerlitz, that he was promised a princely rank; but no sooner was this known than Soult, Angereau and Massena demanded the same titles. After some discussion, Napoleon followed the advice of Berthier and Talleyrand, and determined to promote all his field marshals to princes; if no sooner, they will be proclaimed as such on the 2nd of May.

Rumors of pacific overtures having been made by the French government, were prevalent in the city yesterday, which added to the general satisfaction at the recent popular change of administration, produced a rise in the price of stocks.

February 7.

We this day insert under the head "Russian Note," an article which must be read with great interest. Although without a signature or date, it is, in the northern parts of Germany, particularly in the diplomatic circles, considered as authentic and attributed to prince Dolgoruki, the Russian officer who, our readers will recollect had an interview with the emperor Napoleon previous to the battle of Austerlitz. None of the German editors have dared to publish a copy of it in their journals. It has, however, in a printed form, considerable circulation, and has even found its way into Holland, where notwithstanding all the exertions of the government, is read in private companies. We certainly did not want any new proofs of the insidious arts and treacherous policy of Bonaparte; but if such were wanting they will be found in this note.

RUSSIAN NOTE.

Refutation of certain misrepresentations which have been circulated with a malignant design.

"Having remarked, in different journals, various misrepresentations respecting the missions with which prince Dolgoruki was charged, on the part of his sovereign, to Bonaparte—misrepresentations which have been sanctioned by the thirtieth bulletin of the French army—it has become necessary to refute them, to prevent the progress of false intelligence from continuing their practices.

"The Russian officer who was sent to Bonaparte, at his request, after the refusal of the emperor of Russia to have an interview with him, upon his arrival at the advanced post of the French army, did not wait long before he saw Bonaparte approach, guarded by two squadrons. He approached the Russian officer with great politeness, and conversed with him for some time, as they walked on the road, about uninteresting subjects; then, making a sudden stop, he said, 'well, then, are we to fight much longer?' Upon receiving an answer, that it was impossible to decide that point, he asked, 'what do they want with me? why does the emperor of Russia make war upon me? What does he require of me?' Upon which a political discussion arose, which was not begun by the Russian officer; on the contrary he was drawn into it by questions of a political tendency, put to him by Bonaparte. It would take up too much time to relate all that passed in this conversation: Bonaparte frequently repeated, that the emperor of Russia had only invaded the possessions of his allies, and that all difficulties with France would cease. He spoke of the Ottoman Porte, and, in a vague manner, of other countries bordering upon Russia. Upon the visible repugnance manifested by the Russian officer towards proposals so little worthy of the acknowledged character of his august sovereign, Bonaparte returned to the subject of his being ignorant why they had made war upon him, although it had been mentioned to him several times, that the emperor of Russia's only reason for arming was to succour Austria, and preserve the independence of the other States of Europe, without having the least hostile views against France, and still less against the French nation, which the Emperor Alexander esteemed as it deserved; and far from wishing it any harm, his greatest wish was to see it happy and tranquil, as well as all the powers of Europe. As to himself, he wanted nothing; content with the vast empire over which he reigned, and having no other ambition than to contribute, as he does, to the happiness of his subjects, and to fulfil one of the noblest duties of a great sovereign, that of being useful to his allies, of securing their independence, and not in attacking it after the example of those who bring affliction on the human race by the abuse of that power which chance has placed in his hands.

"As to the proposals of giving up Belgium, and placing the iron crown upon the head of his most implacable enemy (it was the king of Sardinia he meant) they were never made—on the contrary, upon Bonaparte's affecting to assert that such demands had been made to him, the Russian officer positively denied that any such article had ever existed; and he only mentioned among others, that which regarded the real independence of the Batavian republic, which had been already verbally acknowledged by Bonaparte, and that of an establishment for the king of Sardinia in Italy, and an indemnity for his states, which had been invaded by France, referring in support of these proposals, to the tenor of the treaties and conventions, which existed between the emperor and the first consul of the French republic.

"The whole of the conversation, which lasted more than an hour, was confined to these points: Bonaparte always reverting to his projects of invasions, and the Russian officer rejecting them in the name of his sovereign, and requiring nothing more than the real security and tranquillity of all the states of Europe. At last, convinced by the conversation of the Russian officer that it was impossible to prevail upon the emperor Alexander to imitate his conduct, to betray his allies, and to take possession of their states, Bonaparte put an end to the discourse, by abruptly declaring, 'Well then, we shall fight,' to which the Russian officer made no answer, but returned.

"All that has been said respecting the battle of Wicchau, is just as false as what has been reported of the battle of Lambach, Amstetten, and more particularly of Krems, in every one of which the Russians had the advantage. In the last almost totally destroyed the division of general Mortier. One general, sixty-five officers, and five hundred soldiers taken prisoners, five stand of colors, and eight pieces of cannon, were the trophies taken from the French. At the affair of Hollebrunn, the rear-guard only of the Russians, consisting of five thousand three hundred men was attacked; and notwithstanding the French army to the amount of forty thousand, headed by Bonaparte, had on all sides surrounded and attacked the Russians, and occupied the village of Statzeldorf; through which they were obliged to retreat, the Russians, notwithstanding, preferring death with arms in their hands to be taken prisoners, forced their way through the enemy, took several prisoners, and one stand of colours, without losing any of their own, and effected a junction with their own army with no greater loss than that of the French, notwithstanding the superiority of the latter.

"At the battle of Wicchau, (or Austerlitz) in which the emperor Alexander was engaged, exposing himself in every place where the danger was most imminent, the Russian advanced guard, which alone was engaged, obtained considerable advantages, the loss of the French prisoners only, being 24 officers, and more than 100 men.

JAMES KENNEDY, SEN.

KING-STREET.

RESPECTFULLY informs the public that he has received, from LEE & CO'S Patent and Family Medicine Store, New-York, a fresh assortment of the following

Valuable Medicines,

Which are in high esteem and general use throughout the United States, many of them being sold cheaper than the drugs of which they are compounded could be purchased at a retail store.

TAKE NOTICE

That J. Kennedy, Sen. is appointed the only agent for ALEXANDRIA.

DR. HAMILTON'S ELIXIR,

A sovereign remedy for Colds, Obsolete Coughs, Asthma, Catarrhs, Sore Throats, and approaching Consumptions.

To Parents who may have children afflicted with the HOOPING COUGH.

This discovery is of the first magnitude, as it is an immediate relief, checks the progress, and in a short time entirely removes the most cruel disorder to which children are liable.—The Elixir is so perfectly agreeable and the dose so small that no difficulty arises in taking it.

From LUTHER MARTIN, Esq. Attorney-General of the State of Maryland.

Gentlemen,

I comply with your request in stating my opinion of Hamilton's Elixir. It has been used in my family for two or three years past, with uniform success, whenever colds, coughs, or similar complaints have rendered medicine necessary. I have myself found it an excellent and agreeable remedy for a very painful and troublesome affection of the breast, accompanied with forecolds and with obstructed and difficult breathing.

On these accounts I do not hesitate to recommend Hamilton's Elixir, as a valuable medicine, and deserving public attention.

LUTHER MARTIN.

Mr. Abijah Henry, Bridge-Street, Baltimore, was cured by one bottle of Hamilton's elixir of a very complicated disorder, occasioned by a severe cold caught several months ago. He breathed with the greatest difficulty, and was often thrown into weakening sweats when he attempted to walk any distance, and his voice would frequently fail in such a degree that he could only attempt to whisper: he has been upwards of six weeks without a return of his complaints and desires to give this public testimony in favor of his invaluable medicine.

Dr. Hamilton's

GRAND RESTORATIVE,

Is recommended as an invaluable medicine, for the speedy relief and permanent cure of the various complaints which result from dissipated pleasures—juvenile indiscretions—residence in climates unfavorable to the constitution—the immoderate use of tea, frequent intoxication, or any other destructive intemperance—the unskilful or excessive use of mercury—the diseases peculiar to females at a certain period of life—bad lyings in, &c. &c.

And is proved by long and extensive experience to be absolutely unparalleled in the cure of

Nervous Disorders,
Consumptions,
Lowness of Spirits,
Loss of appetite,
Impurity of the blood,
Hysterical affections,
Inward weakness,
Sensitiveness,
Fluorbus (or whites)
Barrenness,

Violent cramps in the stomach and back,
Indigestion,
Melancholy,
Gout in the stomach,
Pains in the limbs,
Relaxations,
Involuntary emissions,
Obstinate gleets,
Impotency, &c. &c.

In cases of extremity, where the long prevalence and obstinacy of disease has brought on a general impoverishment of the system, excessive debility of the whole frame, and a wasting of the flesh, which no nourishment or cordial could repair, a perseverance in the use of this medicine has performed the most astonishing cures.

HAMILTON'S ESSENCE AND EXTRACT OF MUSTARD,

A safe and effectual remedy for gout, rheumatism, palsy, sprains, bruises, pains in the face and neck, &c. And has performed more cures in the above complaint than all the other medicines ever before made public.

From Dr. Weatherburn,

Wythe county, Virginia.

GENTLEMEN,

I purchased at your shop the preparations you call Hamilton's Essence, or Extract of Mustard, which I believe has perfectly removed a chronic rheumatism (of that kind named sciatica, or of the hip joint) under which I had labored for a long time, and which had baffled every article in the Materia Medica, and every mode of treatment received into practice for the cure of this obstinate disease. If you think this letter useful you are at liberty to make it public.

Yours, &c.

W. WEATHERBURN.

John Hoover, rope maker, South Second Street, between Mary and Christian Streets, Philadelphia, voluntarily makes oath as follows, namely,

That his wife, Mary Hoover, was so severely afflicted with a violent rheumatism, very dangerously situated the consequence of a severe cold after lying in, as to be confined to her bed for several weeks, and was at length reduced to the melancholy apprehension of remaining a cripple for life, notwithstanding the most respectable medical advice was followed, and every probable remedy attempted: when seeing several cures performed by Hamilton's Essence and Extract of Mustard, they were procured from Mr. Birch, No. 17, South Second Street. The first application enabled her to walk across the room, and the use of one bottle restored her to her usual state of health and strength.

JOHN HOOVER.

Sworn and subscribed before

ELENEZER FERGUSON, Esq.
One of the Justices of the peace for Philadelphia county.
